1400: From the Vault: Podcaster's website ; Underwriter website On this edition of From the Vault we pay tribute to Elmer "Geronimo" Ji Jaga Pratt, who died on June 3, 2011. This decorated Vietnam War Veteran and Minister of Defense for the Los Angeles chapter of the Black Panther Party was accused and convicted of murder in 1968, despite steadfastly maintaining his innocence. Geronimo Ji Jaga served the next 27 years of his life in prison; in 1997, Pratt's conviction was overturned when new evidence surfaced that proved the prosecution's chief witness, Julius Butler, was a police and FBI informant who lied under oath at the trial. After reaching a multimillion dollar settlement with City of Los Angeles and the U.S. Department of Justice, Ji Jaga dedicated his life and resources to helping men and women he believed to be wrongly incarcerated, working until his death in his adopted homeland of Tanzania. Today we present chilling testimony of human conviction and perseverance, as Geronimo Pratt shares his story of life behind bars from an October, 1997 address at Pasadena City College in California. 1500: Progressive Spirit: Podcaster's website ; Underwriter website Sean Kerrigan, author of "Bureaucratic Insanity: The American Bureaucrats Descent into Madness", says that civilization is about the concentration of power. We are at a point now in which bureaucracy has stripped our lives of meaning. We will talk about bureaucracy, collapse, and finding ways to resist. I also speak with Daina Ramey Berry, associate professor of history and African and African Diaspora Studies, at the University of Texas at Austin. She is the author of "The Price for Their Pound of Flesh: The Value of the Enslaved, from Womb to Grave, in the Building Of A Nation". The overarching theme this week is the commodification of human beings and how we can reclaim and assert our humanity and the humanity of others. Archive 07-20-2017
